

NAME:

BLOCK:

- CENTRAL HISTORICAL QUESTION(S) -

To what extent was there a single dominant global force in the world before Columbus' voyages mattered?

FEATURED BELOW: Map of the world by Henricus Martellus Germanus, produced around 1490

LESSON OBJECTIVE(S)

1.) CREATE an argument about the extent to which there was a single dominant global force in the world before Columbus' voyages mattered (pre-1750)

HOMEWORK

- 1.) Review class notes on presentations to prepare for quiz in class tomorrow.
- 2.) In no more than one page, and no less than half, respond to the following question referencing the material from your classmates' presentation:

*To what extent was there a single dominant global force in the 'pre-Columbian' world?
(i.e. for this assignment we're referring to pre-1750)*

Consider the following definition of "global" from the Oxford American dictionary:

global | 'glɔːbəl |

of or relating to the whole world; worldwide.

see other side for further instructions →

GOOGLE CLASSROOM INSTRUCTIONS

This assignment is to be turned in through Google classroom. This requires you to:

- 1.) log-in to your “lexingtonma” account
- 2.) check the assignment entitled, “Unit 1, Lesson 1 Assignment”
- 3.) complete the assignment in the assignment form sent to you.

I cannot accept a hard copy. It must be turned into google classroom. Sorry to be a stickler about this!

If you cannot log-in, email me as soon as you can.

If you cannot access the internet, please see me first thing in the morning before class with a letter from home.